empowering people @the Jedge of information

Digital empowerment refers to the capacity of individuals, groups to improve their quality of life using safe, affordable digital tools and services.

DEF believes that Digital Empowerment is a very crucial process, where digital is both an 'entry point' as well as a 'site' for building human capability to fight against multidimensional social exclusion.

There is no aspect of the private and the public sphere that is out of the purview of digital.

Digital rights are an extension of human rights in the digital sphere where there is no oppression, violence or violation in the access, creation, or distribution of online content.

The framework of digital rights also aims to ensure that individuals have the freedom to engage online, but there is also a need for protective digital rights against harassment, violence, breach of privacy, and others.

At DEF, digital inclusion has been conceptualised as an idea where everybody has access to digital tools and mediated services irrespective of their social, economic, or geographical locations.

The process of ensuring digital inclusion has been envisioned for both short and long runs. In the short run, digital inclusion has been projected to make the digital ecosystem inclusive where no individual or group is barred from availing their basic rights and entitlements because of the absence of digital tools and services.

In the long run, digital inclusion is projected to extend beyond access, to make the digital ecosystem inclusive where every community has the means and capability to produce, design, and contribute equitable to the digital ecosystem free from social barriers.

Digital exclusion refers to the exclusion of groups of people availing basic needs like

Tood, Shelten,
Information
And Welfare benifits

because these groups have been on the negative side of 'digital divide'.

Digital exclusion is multi-eliminational where social exclusion and digital exclusion are interrelated as both cause and effect.
